

About Ross Guberman

Ross Guberman is the founder and president of Legal Writing Pro, an advanced legal-writing training and editorial consulting firm. He is also an Associate Professorial Lecturer in Law at The George Washington University Law School, where he teaches an advanced-writing seminar on litigation drafting and strategy.

Legal Writing Pro conducts programs for many of the world's largest and most prestigious law firms as well as for dozens of state and federal agencies and bar associations. The Legal Writing Pro line-up receives some of the most enthusiastic feedback of any legal-training programs in the nation.

Before founding Legal Writing Pro, Ross worked at several international law firms as both a litigator and a brief-writing consultant. He holds degrees from Yale, the Sorbonne, and The University of Chicago Law School, where he was Articles Editor of the University of Chicago Legal Forum.

Ross is also an award-winning journalist who writes about law, business, and travel. An August 2002 investigative story he wrote on mortgage giant Fannie Mae has been acclaimed as “one of the best pieces of journalism published in the past five years.”

Ross also draws on his experience as a translator, book author, and book editor. He has commented on legal and business issues for major newspapers, radio stations, and television networks, including CBS and CNN.

A Minnesota native, Ross lives with his wife and two children outside Washington, DC.
